So, thinking "No 50 real harm can come to me here," she went back slowly to the little dressing-18 room. She remained in her position as if bound hand and foot. But they passed along, and she heard them working with the lock of the door, which had closed upon her so untimely. For a few moments there was a dull, rasping sound, and she knew that they had succeeded in Kidney-Wort. Its effect was like a miracla. I soon began to recover the use of my

THE DICINE.

The wound was too deep for the that there was a pathetic despair in the depths of the eyes which only a few hours before had been full of tender love-light for him, and a dreadful pain at her heart, and an infinite sadness, to find that her ided, whom she had set up for worship so much higher than his fellows, was made of baser clay than ordinary men.

By the light which he held she could discover his face dimly. Hardly conscious of what she was doing, she went forward to him as he bent over the safe he had opened. Both had their backs toward her. Without a word she laid a band upon his arm.

Apply the light quickly in her face.

Jessie groped her way back up-stairs to the little dressing room, and, sitting down again upon the lounge, burst into a pession of tears. It had been a sad awakening from her sweet love-dream, for Jessie's ideal had been good, and manly, and honorable, and the real had fellen so far, far below it! She began to realize that she must conceal the fact that she had been there all night, for of course she would be questioned, and she shrank from answering them. So in the morning she contrived to make it appear that she had come in with the other girls, and then later she went out and ate a warm breakfast, or rather tried to force it down, to cure the fainting sensation that came over her. Great was the surprise of all, the next morning, to find the doors open, and greater still was the surprise t find the safe open, and yet no jewels missing. Meanwhile, in his room, Gilbert Knight was writing this note: you dear Jessie, as my heart dictates, because I know myself unworthy. 1 have cared for you-let me confess it have cared for you—let me confess it as I have cared for many others, but STANDARD I never realized until last night that him, and I am glad of it, for I want to discourage his attentions.
